The following cloquent address to the people of the United States, says the editor of the Washington Union, supersedes the necessity of any elaborate appeal from our own pen. We go for the object it promory of one of the first men, not only of his coun- expenses incident to collection. try, but of his age-a patriot whose services have shed a never-dying lustre upon our military fame and upon our civil institutions-whose death has covered a whole nation with mourning, and drawn from the lips of almost countless orators the warm eulogium which is due to his services and merits. It is well to do justice to such men, not only for their own sakes, but for the benefit of posterity, and to cherish the flame of generous emulation in the hearts of men. Washington's statue is about to be erected by Congress. The gratitude and the honor of the nation demand it. Then will it be said that Congress have redeemed the recorded pledges of their illustrious predecessors, and paid due respect to the man who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his counpeople, in behalt of another of their illustrious benefriends everywhere, and the work will be done.

Ballad.

BY MRS. EMMA C. EMBURY. In a work recently published, entitled the White Vermont, a bill has passed the Senate incorporating Li rose cueville et le cour gagne ne plaisent qu'un jour The maiden sate at her busy wheel,

Her heart was light and free, And ever in checiful song boxe forth Her bosoft's harmless gleb. Her song was in mockery of love, And oft I heard her say, 'The gathered rose and the stolen heart, Can charm but for a day.'

I looked on the mailen's rosy check, And her lip so full and bright, And I sighed to think that the traitor love, Should conquer a heart so light: But she thought not of future days of wo, While she carrulled in tones so gay : ' The gathered rose, and the stolen heart,

Can charm but for a day. A year passed on, and again I stood · By the humble cottage door; The maiden sate at her busy wheel, But her look was blithe no more: The big tear stood in her downcast eye. And with sighs I heard her say,

Can charm but for a day.' Ch! well I knew what had dimmed her eye. And made her check so pale ; The maid had forgotten her early song. While she listened to love's soft tale. She had tasted the sweets of his poisoned cup,

' The gathered rose, and the stolen heart,

It had wasted her life away; And the stolen heart, like the gathered rose, Had charmed but for a day. MISSIONARY FROM INDIA!
